

Country Club Members Don Hard Times Garb For Annual Dance

Despite the unusual number of conflicting attractions enlisting the patronage of Santa Ana merry-makers last evening, the Santa Ana Country club drew a sizable guest group within its portals for the Hallowe'en Hard Times dance which annually features this holiday.

A seven-piece orchestra directed by Louise Shirey created music of a contagious rhythm which drew patrons to the ballroom floor for a succession of dances which did not cease until one o'clock.

Costumes of conglomerate type made of the clubhouse a particularly bizarre scene, country club members complying with the edicts of club officials by arriving attired in hard times garb of every description.

Meeting the spontaneous enthusiasm of the guests half way, club officials produced impromptu prizes just before midnight which they bestowed upon Mrs. Charles Doty, impressively arrayed in a handsome Dutch costume, and Edwin B. Van Meter, amusingly disguised as an old woman, as dancers passed in grand march before the three judges. The latter were J. LaMont McFadden, W. O. Hill and Mrs. M. Richards of Los Angeles, a guest of the country club president, W. D. Young of Huntington Beach.

Witches, pumpkins, black cats and yellow lights, traditional accoutrement of the October holiday, decked all parts of the clubhouse, contributing a decorative aspect in entire keeping with the spirit of the evening.

Gay Children's Party Observes Birthday And Hallowe'en

Quite the merriest children's party of the week was the combined Hallowe'en and birthday party honoring the fifth natal day of little Dickie Otto, held at 8:30 o'clock in the evening in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Otto of Huntington Beach. Children and their parents from Santa Ana attended the party.

Arriving at the beach home, guests found smiling pumpkins illuminating the porch. The young guests soon took part in the evening's merriment, for they were presented with Hallowe'en horns which proved to be properly noisy.

Appropriate games were played and boys and girls in attendance had great fun watching Dickie open the many packages they had brought for him.

In serving later in the evening, Mrs. Otto had the assistance of Mrs. J. M. McMillon of Huntington Park; Mrs. Eugene Thomas of Irvine; Mrs. J. M. McMillon, Huntington Park; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Field, Corona; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Lincoln, Corona; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Cropper, Balboa; Mrs. F. M. Thomas and Miss Gladys Thomas, Santa Ana and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Otto and children, Dickie and Donnie Ray.

Kiwanis Minstrel Show Is One of Season's Amusing Parties

In planning a party for the entertainment of the Kiwanettes and a few invited friends, members of Kiwanis club disregarded cards, dancing and the more usual forms of social entertainment, and instead entered wholeheartedly into plans for a minstrel show, which, presented Thursday night in Ebell peacock room, proved one of the outstanding events of a busy Hallowe'en season.

Fred Newcomb Jr., president of the host club, and Dr. Harry G. Huffman, chairman of the social committee, had the assistance of a capable group in working out the plans, the committee including Messrs. Otto Haan, master of ceremonies; Maurice Enderlie, in charge of refreshments; Orlyn Robertson and Fred Crowell, who in turn were assisted by Mesdames Newcomb, Huffman, Haan, Enderlie, Robertson and Crowell.

Kiwanians in black face proved to be clever entertainers indeed, and the whole program was completely enjoyed by an audience which showed its appreciation enthusiastically. Preceding the minstrel show itself, was a series of interesting acts including motion pictures of earlier Kiwanis parties; sleight-of-hand performance by Don Rice, and an old-time riddling act by H. G. Nelson, appearing in genuine "rube" garb.

The rise of the curtain disclosed a picture of an old time minstrel aggregation, with Charles E. Walker as interlocutor, and Orlyn Robertson and O. A. Haley as "end men." Other dusky artists were Kiwanians Don Rice, Roy George, Ellis Diehl, Fred Crowell, Dr. H. G. Huffman, Dr. K. H. Sutherland, Ed Swift and Jerry Hall.

Jokes flew in a fast and furious manner in accordance with all standards of minstrelsy, and were greeted with generous laughter and applause as fads and foibles of Kiwanians and Kiwanettes were dwelt upon. There were songs and musical numbers in amazing variety, including quartet numbers by Messrs. Hall, Diehl, Robertson and Walker. Solists included Roy George, whose selection was "Jungle Town," Fred Crowell in "Ragtime Cowboy Joe," Dr. Sutherland in "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," and Jerry Hall in "Go Long Mule." In each case the ensemble same in strong on the chorus, while other songs in which everybody joined, were such general favorites as "Happy Days Are Here Again," "I Want a Girl," "Smile, Durn You, Smile!" and similar melodies. As a climax to the pleasant entertainment, the minstrels joined with brother Kiwanians and sister Kiwanettes in the enjoyment of pumpkin pie with whipped cream, coffee and other appetizing refreshments served to the accompaniment of the prevailing Hallowe'en colors and symbols.

Mrs. Brown Returns From Visit With Aunt

Mrs. Charles D. Brown has returned to her ranch home on Red Hill avenue, from a short visit in Santa Barbara, where she went to be with her aunt, Dr. Belle Reynolds, on the latter's 92nd birthday anniversary.

Dr. Reynolds will be recalled as a frequent visitor in this city, where she used to be a guest at St. Ann's Inn, and friends will be glad to know that despite her advanced age, she is a remarkably strong and agile woman. The keen mind that made her a leading physician in her youth, remains undimmed, and her interest in world affairs is that of a woman half her age.

A contact forming on one eye is causing her some trouble at present, but arrangements have been made to remove it at the proper time, and after that process, Dr. Reynolds plans to leave for Italy. She has set March as a tentative sailing date for returning to a land that according to her experience, is the pleasantest on the globe, even exceeding her beloved California.

During the Civil War, while her husband was fighting for the Union, Dr. Reynolds practiced her medical profession among the wounded soldiers.

Recognized as a social and club leader in the colorful Village life at Laguna Beach, Mrs. William V. Mathews yesterday was complimented by being named to the presidency of Laguna Beach Garden club, at its annual meeting. Roper-Hatzfeld Party First of Series Planned

Arranged as the first of a series of contract luncheons to be tendered Santa Ana friends by Mrs. Parke S. Roper and Mrs. J. P. Hatzfeld, an affair of this type had its setting yesterday in the home of Mrs. Hatzfeld, 720 D street, in Tustin.

Colors traditionally associated with autumn lent themselves admirably to the Hatzfeld home, party appointments being carried out in yellow and kindred tones, evidenced in candles, berries and other details.

High scores at each of the groups formed for contract play after the luncheon was rewarded at the party's close with a prize bestowed by the two hostesses. These gifts went to Mrs. J. H. Roberts, Mrs. W. E. Winslow, Mrs. L. A. Collier, Mrs. Robert G. Tutill and Mrs. Howard Timmons.

Mrs. Roper and Mrs. Hatzfeld were indebted for various assisting courtesies to Mrs. Alice Harris.

Bank Associates Hold Hallowe'en Revels And Barn Party

Forty-niners, Spanish dons, clowns, gypsy maids, Indians, cowboys, Bowery girls, exponents of the "Gay Nineties," even "The Forgotten Man," joined last night in one of the gayest, merriest events of the Hallowe'en season, when the First National associates met for a costume party in the big barn on the A. J. Cruickshank place. Everyone exclaimed over the varied pleasures of the evening, and congratulated the party committee upon the successful working out of plans.

This committee was headed by the club president, Dean Collier, while Joe Harless was an able first assistant in charge of the various amusing stunts. Decorations which were amazingly clever, had been arranged by June Spray, Ruth Spray, Lena Thomas, Mrs. Joseph H. Daniger, Jean Hill, Merle Hall, Harold Fish and various others who aided not only in the advance plans, but in their execution. In all of these details the committee had the assistance of John L. Bishop, ranch foreman at the Cruickshank place, who was declared by the club heads to have given assistance that was invaluable.

So many amusing and original costumes were to be seen, that the duty of the judges, Mrs. F. E. Farnsworth, Mrs. Timney and Mrs. Elliott, in selecting the best, was quite complicated. This was done during a grand march, and then the merry-makers themselves were asked to select the cleverest disguises from the group pointed out by the judges. Jack Bascom, whose height and breadth made his small boy's outfit especially droll, was the choice among the men, while Mrs. E. R. Sprague's make-up as an old Negro apple-seller, and Mrs. Arthur Ansell's merry widow hat, drooping veil and general disguise, made them share in the final decision.

The special stunt program introduced by Mr. Harless had dignified bank officials entering into an egg race, in which more eggs were broken over the floor than were carried safely to their destination; bank tellers pushing pennants with their noses; bookkeepers diving for apples, and the girls of the different departments eating apples suspended by strings. Prizes were awarded Jack Bascom, Merle Hall and Gene Hitt. Just preceding the dancing to music by Johnson's orchestra, and card playing, directed by Miss Lena Thomas, was a program to which Roy Burns contributed zither solos with M. R. Osborn as accompanist; Percy Weaver yodeling, playing his own ukulele accompaniments; a n d Eleanor Young Elliott gave a monologue. There was but one disappointment in the program, the failure of the "Four Marx Brothers" to give the skit they had prepared, because of the illness of one of their number, Carl Borsch. Neal Hall, Frank Curran and Arthur Wakefield comprised this cleverly costumed group.

Mrs. B. Tingley as a gypsy fortune teller, found her special booth one of the busiest spots in the building. Dancing to excellent music by the Johnson orchestra kept the crowd in a gay kaleidoscope of changing color and form; and bridge drew sufficient enthusiasts for ten tables. Prizes in bridge were won by Mrs. Arthur Ansell and William Smith, scoring high, and by Mrs. Herbert Klotzsky and Dean Campbell, second.

Hot toasted sandwiches, orange ice, pumpkin pie with whipped cream, and coffee were served to supplement the apples and cider served during the entire evening to guests numbering considerably more than the hundred anticipated.

Dwelling, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Jennie, Mrs. Simons, Mrs. Conner, Miss Chance, Mrs. Hilton, Mrs. Harvey and the hostess, Mrs. Fitzgerald.

87th Birthday Gives Incentive for Many Courtesies

Arriving this week at her eighty seventh milestone, Mrs. Katie Hendricks found that she had many warm friends ready to rejoice with her over the event. Tuesday, October 25, was the birthday date, and Mrs. Hendricks found herself showered with many flowers, including those from Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Haynes and Mr. and Mrs. W. Breckenridge of the Calvary church, of which she is a faithful member.

From C. E. Pollins, superintendent of Calvary Sunday school, and Mrs. Pollins, were beautiful Scripture cards. At the week's meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America, there were special features for Mrs. Hendricks, who is the oldest member of the Santa Ana lodge. These features included a lovely cake bearing three lighted candles, green for the verdant past; yellow for the golden present, and pink for a rosy future. These and many other good wishes were expressed in a talk by Mrs. Flora Dalbee, past orator.

On Wednesday, Sedgwick Women's Relief corps, of which Mrs. Hendricks has been a member for many years, honored her with special flowers and birthday cards, and she had the pleasure of greeting Harry Baxter, now of Santa Ana, but who was a member of the Sunday school class she taught more than 50 years ago in Springfield, Ill.

Mrs. Hendricks resided in Garden Grove for a number of years before coming to Santa Ana seven years ago. She was originally from the east, and among birthday cards was one from the R. N. A. of Mount Vernon, N. Y., where she was a lodge officer for a number of years.

Bohemian Party Comes
As Observance of Hallowe'en

A Bohemian party in the De Lux studios, 312 Bredon street, with Joe Wilson as host, served as a Hallowe'en observance for members of the Photographers' association of Southern California, who met last night for a merry social time. Miss Mame Dillon and Mrs. C. Trembley of Anaheim assisted in entertaining. Decorated as an Italian inn, the studio provided an ideal setting for the spaghetti dinner served at 6:30 o'clock. Checked tablecloths, lighted tapers in bottles and other appointments, carried out the Bohemian theme.

Guests contributed to the impromptu program by singing and other entertainment. "The Mountain Hill Billies" gave songs and dances.

Following the dinner, dancing and cards were enjoyed by the 40 members in attendance. Mrs. Mary Betzold, president of the association, announced that the next meeting will be held November 15 in Whittier, with C. M. Wilson as host.

Y. L. I. Hallowe'en
Dance Colorful
Event

Hallowe'en costumes of all descriptions were to be observed in the Knights of Columbus hall last night when the women of the Y. L. I. institute comprised a large reception group welcoming to their holiday dance, a crowd of unusual proportions.

Music for the dancers was provided by an orchestra from Huntington Beach and with the strains of their first number, members and guests formed in line for a grand march before dancing began.

Supervising arrangements for the dance were Mrs. A. L. Stewart, general chairman; Mesdames Lucille Allaire, R. H. Sandon, William Strain of Balboa Beach and Miss Nellie Colomblini.

The next event on the Y. L. I. calendar will take place November 10 when initiation is scheduled and the district deputy, Mrs. R. H. Sandon, will be received officially.

The Christian Life And Law Observance

Text: Ro. 13:1-7; Gal. 6:7-10.
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 30.
By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

There is no deeper problem for thoughtful men and women than the problem of law observance with consideration not only of its practical side, but of the philosophy and relation to spirit, attitude, and freedom which underlies it.

The amount of space that the New Testament gives to the problem, as it confronted the early Christians, makes the writing of Paul and others very valuable for their suggestiveness and guidance in meeting the problem today.

Perhaps it should be said that if we are to get full effect of such writings and teachings, we must take them as a whole. In this particular lesson, for instance, taken chiefly from Romans 13, we have an early statement of Paul's attitude toward law and government, which, I believe it could be shown, was considerably modified in his later life.

Paul was a colonial, born under the Roman empire. It was no small thing to be a free-born Roman citizen, and Paul valued the privilege and the responsibility very highly, as more than one passage shows.

As a man who had devoted his life to large plans and purposes, Paul had an instinctive admiration for the Roman empire with its sweep of power and authority.

He evidently believed also, that the whole this authority was exercised for orderly ends, and he had a large measure of confidence in the sort of justice meted out by Rome.

Thus it was that when Paul found himself, under conditions of his own arrest, unable to get justice in the Palestinian courts, he appealed, as was his citizen's privilege, to Rome and to Caesar. Then came a period of disillusionment. Instead of finding prompt and just consideration of his case at Rome, he found himself held as a prisoner with delay in the process of justice and little means of real vindication.

The result is that in Paul's later writings—the epistles that came from the period of his imprisonment in Rome—there is a very different note. He is not so sure that "powers that are ordained of God," but he speaks of them often as manifestations of the "prince of the power of the air," the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience.

These discriminations are vital and important. The situation is considerably changed from that of Paul's day, in a democracy in which the ultimate rule and au-

LUTHERANS TO HAVE SPECIAL SERVICES

The accomplishments along lines of Reformation of Dr. Martin Luther, 16th century leader of the German Reformation and founder of Lutheranism, will be commemorated at the two Lutheran churches in this city at services tomorrow, pastors of the congregations have revealed. At the Trinity Lutheran church (Missouri Synod) the Rev. William Schmoeck will preach on "The Fundamental Principle of the Reformation" while at the St. Peter Lutheran church a sermon entitled "Our Reformation Heritage Brings Reformation Obligations" will be presented by the Rev. H. W. Meyer.

We should, however, remember that every breakdown of justice and of right, every misuse of power and every denial of rights and liberties to the citizen who is entitled to them, tends, not to the strengthening, but to the weakening of government.

The power of civil institutions in a democracy does not depend upon a spirit of subservience, but upon a spirit of moral and righteous independence, which not only observes and obeys the law, but demands that these laws in themselves, and in their administration, shall be just and righteous.

The obligation resting upon the citizen in this connection is clear and plain. There can be no such thing as law and order where the sense of law and order is not strongly embedded in the citizen and in the entire conception of citizenship. All the sanctions of moral and spiritual life support this high principle in relation to the state, and one cannot be a good Christian without being a good citizen.

The program features a group of familiar and favorite songs, among them "The Old Rugged Cross," recently voted the most popular hymn on the Seth Parker radio program.

New York Pastor To Speak Sunday At Baptist Church

The Rev. J. A. Cooper of New York will be the speaker tomorrow night at the School of World Friendship being conducted at the First Baptist church. The Rev. The subject being studied in this series is the American Indian. The program each evening consists of study groups for the various ages of young people and adults. These groups meet at 6 o'clock and at the usual hour of worship, 7 o'clock, a popular program is presented.

Hymn Writer To Participate In Calvary Service

P. P. Bilhorn, noted soloist and composer of hymns, will be presented in a special program of vocal selections at the Calvary church in Ebell auditorium tomorrow morning and evening in observance of the first anniversary of the founding of that church. It was made known today by the Rev. Frank E. Lindgren, pastor. The Rev. Mr. Lindgren will preach an anniversary sermon on "Peace and Unity" at 11 a. m. POSTMISTRESS PRESIDENT OF WOMAN'S AID

NEWPORT BEACH, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Ida P. Naylor, local postmistress, was elected president of the general organization of the Woman's Aid society yesterday when the four circles of the association met in the Balboa chapel in joint session. Mrs. Charlotte Logan was elected vice president and Mrs. Sara Bowman was made secretary, to succeed herself.

Mrs. Emma Stroup is the retiring president and Mrs. Ella Blair was last year's vice president. Following a pot luck dinner at which 50 people participated, a political program was rendered, each of the three leading political parties and the men who are running on them for the presidency, being represented by a speaker.

The Rev. Russell Stroup represented the Republican party and Hoover, contended that Hoover should be re-elected to succeed himself because of his past record in the various national offices that he has held and because of his attitude on the prohibition question. Prof. H. O. Emsen spoke for the Democratic party and Roosevelt, leading Mr. Roosevelt for his stand on the tariff question, and David Cherry, local school teacher, read the Socialist party platform, gave a sketch of the life of the Socialist candidate, Norman Thomas, and praised the party for the attitude that it takes against wars. Patriotic songs were sung by the group, accompanied as the piano by Edna Walker.

Each of the four circles meets separately. Mrs. F. E. Russell is president of the Newport Heights unit; Mrs. Alfred Smith, president of the Newport Beach circle; Mrs. Mauds Henry, president of the Balboa circle, and Mrs. S. A. Stowell, chairman of the Corona del Mar circle. It has been arranged that the four circles will meet in a joint session bi-monthly.

Dry Leader Will Speak Tomorrow For Presbyterians

When Duncy and the flying horse dropped right into the tree, of course, they both were rather scared. Wee Duncy shouted, "Help me, quick!"

But how could anybody do a thing like that? Next thing he knew, he'd grabbed hold of a limber limb, which proved a real wise trick.

It bent, but held him safe and sound. He didn't topple to the ground. The strange horse, in the meantime, got all tangled in the tree.

The rope which dangled from its side whirled 'round and 'round until the horse was safe as it could be.

When Duncy saw it, he cried out, "Hey, just what is this all about? How will we get down from this place? Our friends aren't very near."

The horse replied, "I'll loudly neigh, and that will bring them all this way. I'm sure that they will rescue both of us when they get here."

The plan worked out. Said

Duncy, "Oh, I see the whole bunch down below. They're going to cut the tree down so's to set both of us free."

"However, I am not so high. I'm going to drop. I'm sure that I will not fall far enough to hurt myself. Wish luck to me!"

He dropped and landed on his feet. "Gee, seeing you is quite a treat," said Scouty. "We all feared that you had disappeared in air."

"Now you can help us saw this tree. Gee, we can do it easily! To leave the flying horse up in the tree would not be fair."

It wasn't very long until wee Coppy's voice rang out real shrill, "The great big tree is falling. It will soon crash on the ground."

The tree came down real slow, of course. 'Twas lucky for the flying horse. The beast then shouted, "Thank you," as the Tinies gathered 'round.

STUDENTS WILL CAST BALLOTS ON NOVEMBER 2

Hoover, Roosevelt or Thomas? Just how these presidential candidates stand with more than 1500 school students will be determined next Wednesday when a straw vote is cast at Santa Ana High school and Junior college. Faculty members have arranged the elections.

L. L. Beeman, head of the social science department, who has general charge of the balloting, announces that Wilton Hilliard, former executive board member, will serve as chairman of a committee handling the junior college election. He will be assisted by Miss Gertrude Jentges and J. D. Parsons, college students.

Lynn H. Crawford, H. A. Gardner and Leon R. McMullen, faculty members, will have charge of the high school balloting, scheduled during the second period of classes next Wednesday.

Regular election booths will be installed for the junior college election, which will be held all day Wednesday. Unlike those in high school, the student programs in junior college are arranged such that an all-day election is necessary to secure a representative vote.

'WET PARADE' SUNDAY TOPIC IN FULLERTON

FULLERTON, Oct. 29.—Dr. Graham C. Hunter, pastor of Fullerton Presbyterian church, will preach on "The Wet Parade" at the morning hour Sunday. The class in "The Prophets and Their Times," will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p. m., to study Prof. J. M. Smith's text book of that title. Teachers of the high school department of the Sunday school will meet at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday.

The monthly "calendar" dinner will be served by the guild at 6:30 p. m., Thursday.

American Legion post members will attend in a body the service at 11 a. m., November 13, for a special Armistice day sermon.

The Woman's Missionary society will sponsor an entertainment November 17 at 7:30 p. m., at the church. On the next evening, the City-Wide young people's union is having a dinner at the church.

The Rev. Allan A. Hunter, brother of the pastor, in charge of the Hollywood Congregational church, and author of "Social Perplexities" and "Youth's Adventure" will address the congregation of the local Presbyterian church at 11 a. m., November 20.

Union Thanksgiving services, in which the Presbyterian congregation will join, are scheduled at the Baptist church for November 23 at 7:30 p. m., with the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, pastor of the Methodist church, in charge.

Girl Reserves' Social Tonight

ORANGE, Oct. 29.—The pleasant hospitality of the Orange Woman's clubhouse was offered members of the Hi-Tri of the Girl Reserves this week when they held a discussion meeting under the leadership of Mrs. Jack Clayton. Fifteen girls gathered around the fireplace where the talks were given by the dancing firelight, the setting being an especially appropriate one for the talk on friendship given by Mrs. Clayton.

Miss Suzanne Clark presided at the opening of the meeting and Miss Dorothy Cook, hospitality chairman, served popcorn balls at the close.

Plans were announced for a Halloween party to be given this evening for Girl Reserves of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades at the home of Miss Ida May Newton on South Batavia street.

Luncheon Held By E. T. C. Group

ORANGE, Oct. 29.—A Halloween luncheon was enjoyed Friday afternoon by members of the E. T. C. club, who were guests of Mrs. Lillian Bishop in her home on East Chapman avenue. Chrysanthemums in mixed shades decorated the home.

Luncheon was served on individual trays appointed in orange and black. Orange salad and other features of the menu carried out the seasonal colors. The group spent the hours following quilting and sewing.

Those present were Mrs. Marsh of Long Beach; Mrs. Anna Richards of Santa Ana; Mesdames Frank Mellor, Alfred Higgins, Winnie Johnson, Gussie Hayes, J. C. Husecroft, F. I. Bird, C. S. Parker and two guests, Mrs. D. C. Pixley and Mrs. Flora Johnson, together with the hostess, Mrs. Bishop. Mrs. Alfred Higgins will be hostess at the next meeting.

COME to CHURCH

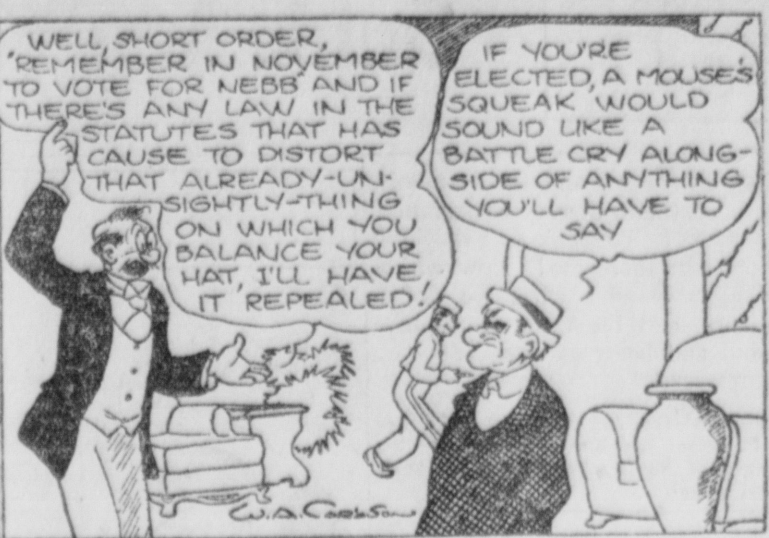

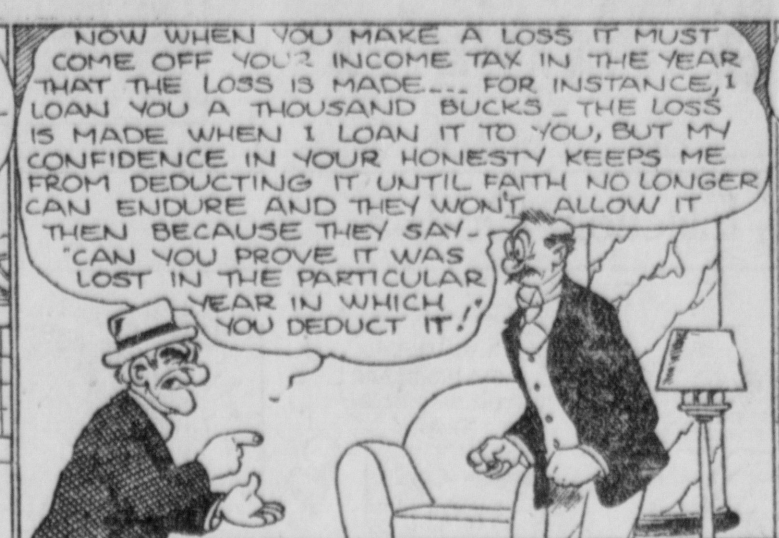

(The Good Shepherd—from a painting by F. Shields)

TENDER of His flock, and mentor of the helpless, He walked through paths of peace and beauty, culling from Nature and her simple, gentle creatures the laws of conduct which centuries and endless generations have taken unto themselves as righteous. Follow Him, and fear not should you stray from the path of His glory—for it is His chosen duty to compassionately lead you back to His fold. In the Church you will find communion with His spirit... come to Church today.

WILLIAM PENN AND THRIFT

William Penn is coming into his share of panegyrics with the commemoration of the 250th anniversary of Penn's landing on American shores. Many a great man is belittled by those who try to extol him. It is a fact that people interpret God in terms of their own understanding of a Supreme Being. A God conceived by an Emerson or a Browning would not be the same Supreme Deity envisioned by an African savage, or a small child. So it is with great men. The quality of their emergence from history depends upon who is calling them forth. Some scholars evoke from the pages of history a being whose place in history is exalted and important, and whose philosophy and precepts are good study and can be adopted with profit. Others do not add to the stature of the individual, as preceding generations have kept him alive.

Mayor J. Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, told the Pennsylvania Federation of Historical Societies the other day that Penn recommended the saving of at least half one's income. "In place of that spirit in America today," he said, "we have many people panhandling on the streets, waiting for the government to give them something because they won't help themselves."

It reminds one of the cartoon of the two derelicts on the New York park bench. A man like the mayor of Philadelphia came along and said: You ought to have saved. And one of the men said: I did. Our whole economic civilization today is built upon a market for goods. The idea would probably have penetrated William Penn's mind quicker than the mind of some of those who extol him. The man who spent when he had money to spend should have no regrets, except as he spent foolishly. Expenditures that keep factory wheels turning and men employed also serve to create a market for more goods.

Emmanuel Kant has said: Thrift is care and scruple in the spending of one's substance. It is no virtue; it requires neither skill nor talent. A spendthrift of good taste requires much more of these qualities than does he who merely saves; an arrant fool can save and put money aside; to spend one's money with refinement on pleasure needs knowledge and skill, but there is no cleverness in accumulating by thrift. The thrifty, who acquire their wealth by saving, are as a rule small-minded people, but amongst the spendthrifts we find men of spirit and high intelligence.

There are two sides, even to precepts which seem to be the essence of virtue.

BISHOP MANNING HAS OUR SUPPORT

Bishop Manning, of the diocese of New York City, has not always commended his actions to an up-to-date group of forward-looking and open-minded men and women either inside or outside the communion of the Protestant Episcopal church. But we hasten to commend him for his action in keeping open the doors of a church within his diocese which the officials decided to close because the rector refused to have separate services for the white and colored members of his church.

It cannot be denied that racial ostracism against the Negroes is growing outside the states of the Union which were once identified with the slave power. It is difficult for even the most respectable Negro to find accommodation in the hotels of northern cities. Religious denominations which have Negro churches associated with them have faced considerable embarrassment when meeting in their national councils because of the refusals of hotels to admit Negro delegates in their dining rooms. Only a few years ago, a conference of Christian workers was held in Detroit, and when it was learned that the hotel at which it was being held refused to serve Negro members of that conference, an influential group of white members, including such men as Sherwood Eddy and Reinhold Niebuhr, walked out, and refused to have anything further to do with the conference.

We recognize the practical difficulties which face hotel keepers in dealing with the race question. They are the victims of a public racial intolerance which they are compelled to recognize. But no church, and no group of Christian workers, can justify their right to draw lines between Christians because of the color of their skins. Bishop Manning has taken the only attitude that a Christian leader can take in such a matter; and we most highly commend him for the positive and the vigorous manner in which he has discharged his duty as a Christian leader.

ANOTHER IDOL IS SHATTERED

Another pleasant notion is by way of being proved without foundation. Having arrived at our impressions of Oxford in the quiet of a summer week-end, particularly the gloaming of a long twilight when there was leisure to walk around and think, it appeared to be a place where one could settle down to that sort of thing, that is, to a quiet existence with ample time for reading long and weighty and worth while things, if one ever wanted to really withdraw into quiet. The idea was strengthened by English novels in which the characters had so much time for discussion at tea tables, garden parties, before fireplaces and on walks.

But behold! From Oxford comes a short cut to an acquaintance with literature. The volume is called "The Oxford Companion to English Literature." It is said to contain the plots of plays, novels and narrative poems, and a full list of the principal characters of English prose, fiction and drama. It is intended to explain allusions commonly to be expected in reading, and to give essential facts about books in English literature, and their authors. In other words, a synthetic literary background. And this from Oxford! To think that they feel the need for short cuts there too! Now whether will our thoughts wander when we dream of quiet and leisure, and the right atmosphere for mind and soul and heart expansion?

The leg-o'-mutton sleeves of the gay '90's are coming back. Perhaps it's the depression; the ladies feel the need of having something up their sleeves more than usual.

A DECLINE IN BOASTING

From so fine a person as Miss Jane Addams people can take admonitions which would prove excitable if they came from a lesser individual. In an address at Swarthmore the other day she deplored "the national self-righteousness of the American people which is often disguised as patriotism." She continued: it is really part of the adolescent self-assertion, sometimes crudely expressed in sheer boasting, which the United States has never quite outgrown. It is also, in another respect, that complacency which we associate with the elderly who feel justified by their own successes, and have completely lost their faculty for self-criticism.

It is one of the few good things the hurricane of the depression has blown, however, namely that the attitude of the people of the United States has changed somewhat. People are more critical, more inclined to self-analysis, less complacent, and only the most uninformed are still boasting. It isn't that the people don't feel that at that America is the best country in the world, but that people realize it isn't as near like Heaven as man could have made it.

Farm Population Gains

New York Times

In the year 1931, for which the figures are now made available by the United States Department of Agriculture, 1,679,000 persons "moved farmward," while only 1,472,000 left farms for towns and cities. In the previous year, 1930, the two movements almost balanced, the tide seemingly just beginning to turn. The gain in 1931 was slight, barely 200,000, but to that is to be added the "surplus" of births over deaths—that is, of migrants who first touch the planet in some rural part of the United States over those who take their departure by way of a grave in some country churchyard—441,000, making a total increase of 648,000, or about one-half of 1 per cent, and lifting the total farm population to 31,260,000 persons. No doubt it is still greater by now.

The migratory increase is attributed to the return of farmers' sons and daughters who, having previously gone to town or city, lost their jobs and sought shelter under the parental roof or found refuge with other relatives. The fact that 1,472,000 left the farms for the city is indicative of the continuing attractiveness of urban centers, small and large. Indeed, in New England and the South Atlantic States more persons left the farm than returned to it, though in all other sections, notably the North Central and the West South Central States, the trend is now more strongly toward the farm.

Even more marked is the migration to smaller towns and cities from the larger cities. One result of this has been the development of truck farms on the fringes of the cities. The figures of farm population gains do not take account of these city "subsistence" gardens. A report from Des Moines, Iowa, in yesterday's Times states that even though there is expected an increase in the unemployment this winter, there will be no serious "relief problem," and largely because of what these emergency gardens have contributed.

Sibyl's Cave Is Found in Southern Italy

San Bernardino Sun

Now that high school and college students are studying Latin again, there ought to be quite a little interest in the latest archaeological news from Italy. Virgil's Aeneas, it seems, is not all poetry and fiction. One of the hardest passages in that famous poem for matter-of-fact modern youth to swallow was the account of the Cumaean Sibyl, in her vast cave with many entrances and rooms, writing her wild prophecies on leaves for the wind to blow about, and her message for the wandering hero.

A scholarly explorer has found near Cumae, in southern Italy, what he is sure is the actual cave described in the poem, with its chambers and inner passages and pools—not so vast and magnificent, of course, as Virgil represents it, but near enough for identification.

It was there, the poet says, that Aeneas was told: "Yield not to evils, but more boldly persist, defiant of fortune's frown, and take the path your destinies allow." It has always seemed rather vague to modern readers; but the Trojan hero had no difficulty about it. Like all successful heroes, he assumed that his path of destiny was where he wanted to go, and so went there.

One thing more remains for that archeologist to discover. That is the entrance to Avernus, revealed by the Sibyl, by which Aeneas went down to Hades and through the Elysian Fields and obtained further information about the past, present and future. Some of us would like to slip down and ask a few questions.

Kemal Covers Lot of Ground

San Francisco Chronicle

If Mustafa Kemal is right we are all Turks. There is nothing sinister about the claim. The Ghazi is in earnest about it. It is all a phase of his national soul forming campaign. He has already called a congress to kick out all the high-falutin speech heard in Istanbul and replace it with the speech of the Anatolian peasant that knows no mixture of Arabic or Persian. These Anatolians are said to derive their speech straight from Adam. And for witness Kemal cites the word "adam" which is the Turkish word for "man."

On such evidence the Ghazi bases his claim of the fatherhood of the Turk over all mankind. It was Turkish the serpent used in the temptation scene in the Garden of Eden, when, as John Bull says it in his ancient ballad, "Adam dove and Eve span." But to continue the verse, "who was then the gentleman." Maybe he wasn't. Kemal says he was a Turk.

If this is a hard saying, pass it by. It is merely a reaction to the grandiose claims of the lord of the Bosphorus.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

When Bradford and the Pilgrim boys
On Cape Cod bay were felling trees,
They seized their arms at every noise
That drifted down the landward breeze.
For red men—not so noble, then,
But filled with enmity and guile—
Were lurking in the glade and glen
And plotting mischief all the while.
The white men didn't flinch or shrink
Or grouse about their situation;
And helped to found the U. S. nation.

The men who journeyed to the West,
And North and South and everywhere,
Were neither worried nor distressed
Because they lived on scanty fare.
They ate such forage as they found,
And, lacking mounts or motor cars,
They spread their blankets on the ground
And slept beneath the shining stars.
They neither wearied on their way
Nor grew despairing or faint-hearted,
And that is why the U. S. A.
Has flourished since the time it started.

No money had these pioneers;
What food they ate was scant and plain,
Yet they knew neither qualms nor fears,
And perils threatened them in vain.
As on their sure, unswerving way
These founders of the nation fought
Such troubles as are ours today
They would have lightly set at naught.
If they could laugh at deadly fears,
And on all opposition trample,
Perhaps, in far less troublous years
We well might follow their example.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

ECONOMY AND UNEMPLOYMENT

Cities the country over are faced by a two-horned dilemma. It is: (1) An insistent cry for public works to provide employment.

(2) An impaired credit that makes it very difficult to borrow money for such public works.

I have before me letters from several city officials who are harassed by this dilemma.

Several, groping for ways and means of bringing their budgets to a condition that will improve the credit of their cities, raise the question of suspending already authorized programs of public works.

I answer here, as I have answered these individual inquiries, that it is not, in my judgment, wise policy to suspend already authorized public works as a first move toward balancing city budgets.

That will but aggravate the unemployment situation.

The first move is obviously a ruthlessly realistic budgetary reform.

If costs are anywhere inflated in city purchases or city operations, costs must be deflated.

If waste is anywhere being permitted, waste must be eliminated. It may be said, and said truly, that even the deflation of costs and elimination of waste will mean less employment for some.

But that is only a transition effect.

The great thing realistic budgeting reform will do for the city that effects it will be to restore the city's credit.

With restored credit, the city is in position to attack the problem of relief and public works in a statesmanlike manner.

The city can then turn to such sources of credit as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at least for such self-liquidating public works as it may have in mind, and for more besides.

One thing is important to keep always in mind in our municipal economy campaigns while depression is on: For the time being the objective of budgetary reform should not be blind cutting for savings' sake, but the getting of the city in position to attack the unemployment problem constructively.

FORCED MANNERS

You can force a child to have fine manners. But you can never force him to carry the manner of a good mannered child. Manner is the expression of the directing mind that is within. Manners are the veneer, the polish of the outside. A child can wear the manners of an adult, but they sit on him as the clothes of the adult might sit. They are no better fit.

Little children do not understand grownup manners. They do not know why we say, Good morning, or, How are you? The sounds have no meaning to them because they have no roots in their experience. It is true the child can be forced to make these gestures of manners but what of it? What good comes of it? If a child looks up and smiles a greeting that is all that is needed. He speaks his own language of welcome and that is in itself good manners. If he ignores the presence of the adult let him alone. There is no need of making him conscious of the situation save by your example. You can do the greeting and speed the parting. By and by he will imitate you and later on the imitation becomes his own action.

The child who is busy building a house of blocks is not aware of the entrance of visitors save in the slight degree that they wake on his senses. He is not sufficiently aroused to make him leave his play and say polite words. It is the height of folly to insist that he leave his play, come forward and greet the guests, shaking hands, bowing and saying, "How do you do." Far better to let him alone until his mind is free to note the guests. Then if he comes forward of his own accord, say for him the words he needs, and make the greeting as simple and as easy for him as possible. There is no pleasure for the guests in a painful lesson on manners with themselves as the object of respect and the weeping child as the victim.

The effort to force good manners, adult standards upon little children is not only wasted, it is directed in a wrong way for a bad cause. The child who is put into the straight jacket of adult manners is stunted. His way of growth is wild and free. He is noisy. He is careless of the feelings of others because he is unconscious of them. He is to be trained to gentleness and consideration by slow and patient methods. Instruction in polite behavior is to be given privately. Most of all the examples that are set for him must conform to the standards to which he is to be held. This background is what gives a child his manners and his manner. He takes it in with his daily bread. It becomes a part of him and remains a part of him for life.

The child who has been subdued to wearing the manners of the polite adult is a sad child. A sad child does not grow. The real test of any method of instruction is the happiness of the child. If he is happy he is growing. If he is unhappy there is something wrong and it must be changed.

I would not have this construed to mean that children are not to be taught good manners. This instruction is essential. I am asking only that they do more harm than good. Terrible thoughts may lurk behind the polite mask of a little child. Force always breeds resentment and forced manners are no exception to that rule.

CONFLANS IS SHELLED

On Oct. 29, 1918, Americans shelled the Conflans region. French attacked on a seven-mile line east of Laon. Rhine Germans were in wild flight.

In Italy, Allied forces captured Conegliano, five miles from the Piave, and pushed on along a front of 37 miles.

Continuing his efforts for immediate cessation of hostilities on its fronts, Austria-Hungary sent a note to Secretary Lansing, asking him to intervene with President Wilson for an immediate armistice.

In Germany, the federal council approved the bill amending the constitution in the form adopted by the Reichstag. The Bavarian premier notified Berlin that the Bavarian royal family would claim the imperial throne in the event of Kaiser Wilhelm's abdication.

Departure of 14 men from Orange county for training at Fort Rosecrans, San Diego, was attended by no demonstration because of the flu situation. Twelve of the men went from Fullerton. While the others were Don L. Andrews of Santa Ana, and William H. Harris of Orange.

Among the countless Santa Anans who lost close relatives by their deaths from flu, was Eloy Lucero, who had a message telling him of the death in Santa Rosa, N. Mex., of his brother, Boni Lucero, superintendent of the Santa Rosa schools.

"Well, of all the darned fools!" she exclaimed.—Tit-Bits.

UNWANTED CHIVALRY

He had been reading knightly romances and grew dissatisfied with the present unromantic state of the world. He believed it his duty to inject some romance into the daily grind.

On a rainy, muddy day he sallied forth to perform some knightly errand. He saw a pretty girl about to step from her car to a dirty pavement. Hastening forward, he spread his coat under her dainty feet.
